Accounting probably isn't your primary expertise. So it creates headaches and frustration, not to mention takes time! That's time you could be devoting to your business. If you're doing your own books, the question you need to ask yourself is this: Could someone do this quicker, smarter, and maybe even better than me? The answer is a likely, yes.

So, the next question is who do you hire and how? In many companies, accounting isn't a full time job. When you outsource you pay only for the time you need. Simple as that.
